Horatio Nelson and the Battle of Trafalgar

Why is Nelson famous?

Horatio Nelson was born in Norfolk in 1758. As a young child he wasn't particularly healthy but he still went on to become one of Britain's greatest heroes.

At the young age of 12, Nelson joined the navy on a ship captained by his uncle and his sea career went from strength to strength.

Nelson spent much of his life at sea and many years in battle but his most famous – the Battle of Trafalgar, in which he bravely led his British fleet to victory – was also his last.

Nelson died in 1805 and was so respected that he received a state funeral and was buried in St Paul's Cathedral.

Did you know?

- Nelson's Column is a very famous landmark in London's Trafalgar Square. It was built to commemorate all that Nelson achieved. The work to build it started in 1840 and finished three years later in 1843. It cost £47,000. The famous monument was refurbished in 2006 at a cost of £420,000. The column is 51.6 metres tall from the bottom of the pedestal to the top of Nelson's hat.
- Nelson didn't always obey orders! Apparently during one battle he ignored orders to stop attacking the enemy. He used his bad eye to look through the telescope and claimed he couldn't see the signal to withdraw!
- Nelson was a very clever sailor. One of his best victories was during the Battle of the Nile in 1798 where he tricked the French ships by sailing between the fleet and the shore and attacking them.
- During the Battle of the Nile, Nelson destroyed Napoleon's forces. Napoleon was the French military leader – and probably Nelson's greatest and most famous enemy!
- Nelson's greatest-ever victory at the Battle of Trafalgar – which stopped Napoleon from invading Britain – was also his last. He was hit by a bullet and died hours later on the 21 October 1805.
- After he was killed, his body was preserved in brandy and transported back to England where he was given a state funeral.
- Would you believe the HMS Victory had an amazing 104 cannons?
